

Organization Science

Publication details, including instructions for authors and subscription information:
<http://pubsonline.informs.org>

About Authors

To cite this article:

(2004) About Authors. Organization Science 15(5):614–616. <https://doi.org/10.1287/orsc.1040.0098>

Full terms and conditions of use: <https://pubsonline.informs.org/Publications/Librarians-Portal/PubsOnLine-Terms-and-Conditions>

This article may be used only for the purposes of research, teaching, and/or private study. Commercial use or systematic downloading (by robots or other automatic processes) is prohibited without explicit Publisher approval, unless otherwise noted. For more information, contact permissions@informs.org.

The Publisher does not warrant or guarantee the article's accuracy, completeness, merchantability, fitness for a particular purpose, or non-infringement. Descriptions of, or references to, products or publications, or inclusion of an advertisement in this article, neither constitutes nor implies a guarantee, endorsement, or support of claims made of that product, publication, or service.

© 2004 INFORMS

Please scroll down for article—it is on subsequent pages

With 12,500 members from nearly 90 countries, INFORMS is the largest international association of operations research (O.R.) and analytics professionals and students. INFORMS provides unique networking and learning opportunities for individual professionals, and organizations of all types and sizes, to better understand and use O.R. and analytics tools and methods to transform strategic visions and achieve better outcomes. For more information on INFORMS, its publications, membership, or meetings visit <http://www.informs.org>

About Authors

François Bar (“A Test of the Individual Action Model for Organizational Information Commons”) is Associate Professor of Communication in the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Southern California. His research interests include comparative telecommunication policy, as well as economic, strategic, and social dimensions of computer networking, new media, and the Internet. His research has been published in such journals as Telecommunications Policy, The Federal Communications Law Journal, The Information Society, Infrastructure Economics and Policy, Communications and Strategies, Réseaux, and the International Journal of Technology Management. Address: Annenberg School for Communication, University of Southern California, 3502 Watt Way, Los Angeles, CA 90089-0281; telephone: (213) 821-5306; e-mail: fbar@usc.edu.

Rossella Cappetta (“When and How Trustworthiness Matters: Knowledge Transfer and the Moderating Effect of Casual Ambiguity”) is Assistant Professor of the Institute of Organization and Information Systems at Bocconi University, Milan (Italy). She earned her Ph.D. from Bocconi University in 2001. Her research interests focus on knowledge transfer, intra- and interfirm coordination mechanisms, and organizational resources for competition in high symbolic industries. Address: Institute of Organization and Information Systems, and SDA Bocconi School of Management, Bocconi University, Viale Isonzo, 23, 20135 Milan, Italy; e-mail: rossella.cappetta@uni-bocconi.it.

Paul R. Carlile (“Transferring, Translating, and Transforming: An Integrative Framework for Managing Knowledge Across Boundaries”) recently moved from MIT’s Sloan School of Management to Boston University’s School of Management as an associate professor in the Information Systems Department. His work focuses on the challenges of and solutions to creating innovative outcomes when the knowledge to do so is distributed across specialized domains. Address: Information Systems Department, School of Management, Boston University, Room 635, 595 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, MA 02215; telephone: (617) 353-4287; fax: (617) 353-5003; e-mail: carlile@bu.edu.

Todd H. Chiles (“Organizational Emergence: The Origin and Transformation of Branson, Missouri’s Musical Theaters”) is an assistant professor of management at the University of Missouri–Columbia. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Oregon. His research interests include the emergence, evolution, and transformation of organizations and industries, the dynamics of organization, strategy, and entrepreneurship from complexity theory and “Austrian School” perspectives, and the interplay of social and market institutions and processes. His research has been published in such journals as the Academy of Management Review and the Journal of Management Studies. Address: Department of Management, College of Business, University of Missouri, 443 Cornell Hall, Columbia, MO 65211-2600; telephone: (573) 884-9709; fax: (573) 884-6857; e-mail: chilest@missouri.edu.

Steven C. Currall (“The Coevolution of Trust, Control, and Learning in Joint Ventures”) is the William and Stephanie Sick Professor of Entrepreneurship, and Associate Professor of Management in the Jesse H. Jones Graduate School of Management at Rice University. Currall earned a Ph.D. from Cornell University. He conducts research in the areas of trust, negotiation, emerging technology companies, and corporate governance. He serves on the editorial review board of the Journal of Organizational Behavior and Academy of Management Executive. Address: Jones Graduate School of Management, Rice University, P.O. Box 1892, Houston, TX 77251; e-mail: scc@rice.edu.

Andrew J. Flanagan (“A Test of the Individual Action Model for Organizational Information Commons”) earned a Ph.D. in 1996 from the Annenberg School for Communication, University of Southern California. He is Associate Professor in the Department of Communication at the University of California, Santa Barbara. His research focuses on the ways in which communication and information technologies structure human interaction, with emphases on the contemporary media environment, collaborative technologies, collective action among organizational members, and organizational theory. Address: Department of Communication, University of California, Santa Barbara, Santa Barbara, CA 93106; telephone: (805) 893-7892; e-mail: flanagan@comm.ucsb.edu.

Janet Fulk (“A Test of the Individual Action Model for Organizational Information Commons”) is Professor of Communications at the Annenberg School for Communication and Professor of Management & Organization at the Marshall School of Business, University of Southern California. Her research focuses on how communication systems foster organizational collaboration and knowledge distribution. Her books include Shaping Organizational Form: Communication, Connection and Community (coauthored with Gerardine DeSanctis), Organizations and Communication Technology (coauthored with Charles Steinfield), and Policing Hawthorne (coauthored with Greg Patton and Peter Monge). Recent articles have appeared in Human Relations, Communication Theory, Organization Science, and the Academy of Management Journal. She is Fellow of the Academy of Management. Address: Annenberg School for Communication, and Marshall School of Business, University of Southern California, 3502 Watt Way, Los Angeles, CA 90089-0281; telephone: (213) 740-0941; fax: (213) 740-0014; e-mail: fulk@usc.edu.

Rebecca Heino (“A Test of the Individual Action Model for Organizational Information Commons”) earned her Ph.D. from the Annenberg School for Communication, University of Southern California. After spending a year in London as a visiting professor for the Program in Global Communication, offered jointly by the London School of Economics and Politics and the University of Southern California, she began her faculty position at the McDonough School of Business, Georgetown University. Her research focuses on the use of communication technologies within organizations. Her work has appeared in Communication Research, The Journal of Sport and Social Issues, and Telework: The New Workplace of The 21st Century. Address: McDonough School of Business, Georgetown University, 37th and O Streets, NW, Washington, D.C. 20057; e-mail: rdh26@georgetown.edu.

Thomas J. Hench (“Organizational Emergence: The Origin and Transformation of Branson, Missouri’s Musical Theaters”) is an associate professor of management at the University of Wisconsin–La Crosse. With nearly 20 years of progressively responsible management experience in rapid-growth manufacturing firms, domestic and international, he received his Ph.D. from the University of South Carolina. His research interests include the dynamics of change and self-organizing systems applied in the areas of strategy, entrepreneurship, innovation, and creativity. His research has been published in the Academy of Management Executive, Journal of Management History, Journal of Business and Entrepreneurship, Journal of Genocide Research, and Management Decision. Address: Department of Management, College of Business Administration, University of Wisconsin–La Crosse, La Crosse, WI 54601; telephone: (608) 785-6661; fax: (608) 785-8549; e-mail: hench.thom@uwlax.edu.

Witold J. Henisz (“Firm- and Country-Level Trade-offs and Contingencies in the Evaluation of Foreign Investment: The Semiconductor Industry, 1994–2002”) is an assistant professor of management at The Wharton School. He received his Ph.D. from the Haas School of Business at the University of California, Berkeley. His research examines the impact of political hazards on international investment strategy. He considers both the determinants of government attempts to redistribute investor returns to the broader polity as well as the determinants of the success of individual firms in withstanding such pressure. Address: The Wharton School, 3115 Steinberg Hall–Dietrich Hall, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, PA 19104-6370; e-mail: henisz@wharton.upenn.edu.

Jody Hoffer Gittell (“Contextualizing Patterns of Work Group Interaction: Toward a Nested Theory of Structuration”) is Assistant Professor of Management at Brandeis University’s Heller School for Social Policy and Management. Her research explores how organizational practices shape the communication and relationship patterns through which work is coordinated. She serves as cochair of the Work and Employment Relations Network for the Industrial Relations Research Association, and as cochair of the Airline Industry Council. She received her Ph.D. in management from MIT’s Sloan School of Management. Address: The Heller School for Social Policy and Management, Brandeis University, Waltham, MA 02454; e-mail: jgittell@brandeis.edu.

Andrew C. Inkpen (“The Coevolution of Trust, Control, and Learning in Joint Ventures”) is Professor of Management at Thunderbird, The Garvin School of International Management. He received his Ph.D. from the Ivey School, University of Western Ontario. His research interests include the management of knowledge in strategic alliances and learning in multinational organizations. His research has been published in a variety of journals including the Academy of Management Review, California Management Review, Journal of International Business Studies, Organization Science, and Strategic Management Journal. Address: Thunderbird, The Garvin School of International Management, 15249 N. 59th Ave., Glendale, AZ 85306–6000; e-mail: inkpena@t-bird.edu.

Robert J. Jensen (“When and How Trustworthiness Matters: Knowledge Transfer and the Moderating Effect of Casual Ambiguity”) is a Ph.D. candidate at The Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania. He is also currently a visiting instructor at the Marriott School, Brigham Young University. His research interests focus on knowledge transfer, business unit replication, intrafirm heterogeneity, franchising, and the role of trust in an organizational context. Address: Department of Organizational Leadership and Strategy, Marriott School of Management, Brigham Young University, 772 TNRB, Provo, UT 84602; e-mail: rj33@byu.edu.

Nancy Katz (“Contextualizing Patterns of Work Group Interaction: Toward a Nested Theory of Structurations”) is Associate Professor of Public Policy at the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University. Katz has coauthored analyses of how network notions apply to small work groups, including “Network Theory and Small Groups” in Small Group Research; and “Applying a Network Perspective to Small Groups: Theory and Research,” in M. Poole and A. Hollingshead, eds. Theories of Small Groups: An Interdisciplinary Perspective (Sage). Katz earned a Ph.D. in organizational behavior at Harvard. Address: Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University, Cambridge, MA 02138; e-mail: nancy_katz@ksg.harvard.edu.

Jeffrey T. Macher (“Firm- and Country-Level Trade-offs and Contingencies in the Evaluation of Foreign Investment: The Semiconductor Industry, 1994–2002”) is an assistant professor of strategy, economics, and policy in the McDonough School of Business at Georgetown University. He received his Ph.D. from the Haas School of Business at the University of California, Berkeley. His research examines the strategic management of technological innovation. He considers how firm organization affects technological and innovative performance, primarily in high-technology industries. Address: McDonough School of Business, G-04 Old North, Georgetown University, Washington, D.C. 20057; e-mail: jtm4@georgetown.edu.

Alan D. Meyer (“Organizational Emergence: The Origin and Transformation of Branson, Missouri’s Musical Theaters”) is the Charles H. Lundquist Professor of Entrepreneurial Management at the University of Oregon. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley. He has written extensively on organizations’ adaptations to environmental jolts, technological innovations, shifts in industry boundaries, and regulatory changes. Meyer’s current research focuses on network emergence and evolution within the nanotechnology investing community. Address: Department of Management, Charles H. Lundquist College of Business, University of Oregon, Eugene, OR 97403-1208; telephone: (541) 346-5178; fax: (541) 346-3341; e-mail: ameyer@uoregon.edu.

Peter R. Monge (“A Test of the Individual Action Model for Organizational Information Commons”) is Professor of Communication at the Annenberg School for Communication and Professor of Management and Organization at the Marshall School of Business, University of Southern California. He has published Theories of Communication Networks (coauthored with Noshir Contractor), Communicating and Organizing (coauthored with Vince Farace and Hamish Russell), Multivariate Techniques in Human Communication Research (coauthored with Joe Cappella), Policing Hawthorne (coauthored with Janet Fulk and Greg Patton), and Reasoning with Statistics, 5th ed. (coauthored with Fred Williams). His research on organizational communication networks, collaborative information systems, globalization and communication processes, evolutionary theory, and research methods has been published in numerous leading journals. He is a fellow and former president of the International Communication Association, and a former editor of Communication Research. Address: Annenberg School for Communication, and Marshall School of Business, University of Southern California, 3502 Watt Way, Los Angeles, CA 90089-0281; telephone: (213) 740-0921; fax: (213) 740-0014; e-mail: monge@usc.edu.

Leslie A. Perlow (“Contextualizing Patterns of Work Group Interaction: Toward a Nested Theory of Structuration”) is Professor of Organizational Behavior at the Harvard Business School. She received her Ph.D. from the MIT’s Sloan School of Management. Her research interests include the nature of work interactions, time use, and work-family issues. Address: Harvard Business School, Harvard University, 343 Morgan Hall, Boston, MA 02163; e-mail: lperlow@hbs.edu.

Gabriel Szulanski (“When and How Trustworthiness Matters: Knowledge Transfer and the Moderating Effect of Casual Ambiguity”) is Associate Professor of Strategy & Management at INSEAD’s Asian Campus. He holds a Ph.D. in management with a specialization in strategy from INSEAD. His research focuses on knowledge management and strategic decision-making processes. Address: Department of Strategy and Management, INSEAD, Asia Campus, Ayer Rajah Ave., 138676 Singapore; e-mail: gabriel.szulanski@insead.edu.