

Organization Science

Publication details, including instructions for authors and subscription information:
<http://pubsonline.informs.org>

About Authors

To cite this article:

(2008) About Authors. Organization Science 19(2):377-379. <https://doi.org/10.1287/orsc.1080.0362>

Full terms and conditions of use: <https://pubsonline.informs.org/Publications/Librarians-Portal/PubsOnLine-Terms-and-Conditions>

This article may be used only for the purposes of research, teaching, and/or private study. Commercial use or systematic downloading (by robots or other automatic processes) is prohibited without explicit Publisher approval, unless otherwise noted. For more information, contact permissions@informs.org.

The Publisher does not warrant or guarantee the article's accuracy, completeness, merchantability, fitness for a particular purpose, or non-infringement. Descriptions of, or references to, products or publications, or inclusion of an advertisement in this article, neither constitutes nor implies a guarantee, endorsement, or support of claims made of that product, publication, or service.

Copyright © 2008, INFORMS

Please scroll down for article—it is on subsequent pages

With 12,500 members from nearly 90 countries, INFORMS is the largest international association of operations research (O.R.) and analytics professionals and students. INFORMS provides unique networking and learning opportunities for individual professionals, and organizations of all types and sizes, to better understand and use O.R. and analytics tools and methods to transform strategic visions and achieve better outcomes. For more information on INFORMS, its publications, membership, or meetings visit <http://www.informs.org>

About Authors

Paul S. Adler (“Perspective—Professional Work: The Emergence of Collaborative Community”) is a professor in the Department of Management and Organization at the Marshall School of Business, University of Southern California. He received his Ph.D. in economics and management at the University of Picardie, France. His research and teaching focus on organization design, with a particular focus on technical, professional, and manufacturing operations. Address: Dept. of Management and Organization, Marshall School of Business, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, CA 90089; e-mail: padler@usc.edu.

Michel Anteby (“Identity Incentives as an Engaging Form of Control: Revisiting Leniencies in an Aeronautic Plant”) is an assistant professor of organizational behavior at the Harvard Business School. He earned a joint Ph.D. in management from New York University and in sociology from the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales in Paris. His research focuses on work practices, members’ experiences of these practices, and the creation of moral boundaries. Address: Harvard Business School, Morgan Hall 321, Boston, MA 02163; e-mail: manteby@hbs.edu.

Emmanuelle Fauchart (“Norms-Based Intellectual Property Systems: The Case of French Chefs”) is Assistant Professor at the Conservatoire National des Arts et Métiers in Paris. She received her Ph.D. in economics from the Sorbonne University. Her research interests include information and knowledge sharing, IP issues, and entrepreneurship. Address: Laboratory of Econometrics, CNAM, 2 rue Conté, 75003 Paris; e-mail: fauchart@cnam.fr.

Andrea Fosfuri (“The Penguin Has Entered the Building: The Commercialization of Open Source Software Products”) is currently Visiting Associate Professor at the School of Management, Boston University, while on leave from the Department of Business Administration, University Carlos III of Madrid, Spain. He holds a Ph.D. in economics from University Pompeu Fabra in Barcelona, Spain. His research has focused on international entry modes, technology licensing, and management of intellectual property. He coauthored Markets for Technology: Economics of Innovation and Corporate Strategy, published by MIT Press. Address: School of Management, Boston University, 595 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, MA 02215; e-mail: fosfuri@bu.edu.

Marco S. Giarratana (“The Penguin Has Entered the Building: The Commercialization of Open Source Software Products”) is an associate professor of management at the Department of Business Administration, University Carlos III of Madrid, Spain. He received his Ph.D. in economics and management in 2003 from the Sant’Anna School of Advanced Studies in Pisa, Italy, and a B.A. in economics in 1997 from the Bocconi University in Milan, Italy. He works on two broad research lines; the first analyzes the effect of intangible assets on firm strategies and performance, and the second focuses on how organization structures could generate different strategic behaviors. His work appears in Research Policy and Organization Studies, and multiple edited volumes. Address: Dept. of Business Administration, Universidad Carlos III de Madrid, Calle Madrid 126, 28903, Getafe, Madrid, Spain; e-mail: marco.giarratana@uc3m.es.

Charles Heckscher (“Perspective—Professional Work: The Emergence of Collaborative Community”) is a professor and the Director of the Center for Workplace Transformation at Rutgers University. His research focuses on organization change and the changing nature of employee representation. His books include The New Unionism, White-Collar Blues, and The Collaborative Enterprise. Address: School of Management and Labor Relations, Rutgers University, New Brunswick, NJ 08981; e-mail: cch@heckscher.us.

Michael G. Jacobides (“How Capability Differences, Transaction Costs, and Learning Curves Interact to Shape Vertical Scope”) is an associate professor of strategic and international management at the London Business School and Sumantra Ghoshal Fellow at the Advanced Institute of Management Research. He received his Ph.D. in strategy from The Wharton School and his research focuses on the causes and consequences of the division of labor between and within organizations. He also works with organizations facing strategic challenges, and his research has been published in journals such as Organization Science, SMJ, AMJ, AMR, ICC, and Research Policy. Address: Advanced Institute for Management Research, London Business School, Regent’s Park, Sussex Place, London NW1 4SA, United Kingdom; e-mail: mjacobides@london.edu.

Sirkka L. Jarvenpaa (“Knowledge Collaboration Among Professionals Protecting National Security: Role of Transactive Memories in Ego-Centered Knowledge Networks”) received her Ph.D. in business administration from the University of Minnesota in 1986. She is currently Professor of Information Systems, the Director of the Center for Business, Technology, and Law, and the James Bayless/Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Chair in Business Administration at McCombs School of Business, University of Texas at Austin. She has served as the Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of Association for Information Systems, Coeditor-in-Chief of the Journal of Strategic Information Systems, and Senior Editor for MIS Quarterly and Information Systems Research. Address: Center for Business, Technology, and Law, McCombs School of Business, B6500, University of Texas at Austin, Austin, TX 78712; e-mail: sirkka.jarvenpaa@mcombs.utexas.edu.

Idalene F. Kesner (“Performance Implications of Firm Resource Interactions in the Acquisition of R&D-Intensive Firms”) is the Frank P. Popoff Chair of Strategic Management and the Chairperson of the Department of Management at the Kelley School of Business, Indiana University, where she also earned her Ph.D. Her research focuses primarily CEO succession, corporate boards of directors, and other areas connected to top management team decision making. Her work has appeared in numerous journals including Organization Science, Academy of Management Journal, Strategic Management Journal, and Harvard Business Review. Address: Kelley School of Business, Indiana University, Dept. of Management, BU 660C, 1309 E. 10th Street, Bloomington, IN 47405-1701; e-mail: ikesner@indiana.edu.

David R. King (“Performance Implications of Firm Resource Interactions in the Acquisition of R&D-Intensive Firms”) is Lieutenant Colonel in the U.S. Air Force and the commander of the AC-130 Aeronautical Systems Squadron at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. He earned his Ph.D. in strategy and entrepreneurship from Kelley School of Business, Indiana University. His research focuses on innovation and merger and acquisition performance. His work is listed on the Internet and appears in Strategic Management Journal, Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Management, Journal of Management Studies, and Organization Science. Address: 1895 Fifth St., Wright-Patterson AFB, OH 45433; e-mail: david.king.2@us.af.mil.

Seok-Woo Kwon (“Perspective—Professional Work: The Emergence of Collaborative Community”) is an assistant professor at the A. Gary Anderson Graduate School of Management, University of California, Riverside. He received his Ph.D. in management and organization from the Marshall School of Business, University of Southern California. His research interests include technology and innovation management and entrepreneurship. Address: A. Gary Anderson Graduate School of Management, University of California, Riverside, Riverside, CA 92521; e-mail: seokwook@ucr.edu.

Alessandra Luzzi (“The Penguin Has Entered the Building: The Commercialization of Open Source Software Products”) is an assistant professor of management at the Department of Business Administration, University Carlos III of Madrid. She received her Ph.D. in economics and management in 2004 from the Sant’Anna School of Advanced Studies in Pisa, Italy. Her research is focused primarily on the analysis of firms’ intellectual property management and technology commercialization strategy. Her research interests also involve the analysis of firm growth and financial constraints. Address: Dept. of Business Administration, Universidad Carlos III de Madrid, Calle Madrid 126, 28903, Getafe, Madrid, Spain; e-mail: alessandra.luzzi@uc3m.es.

Ann Majchrzak (“Knowledge Collaboration Among Professionals Protecting National Security: Role of Transactive Memories in Ego-Centered Knowledge Networks”) received her Ph.D. in social psychology at the University of California, Los Angeles in 1980. She is currently Professor of Information Systems at the Marshall School of Business, University of Southern California. Her research focuses on the design of technology to facilitate human agility and ingenuity. Her publications include such books as The Human Side of Factory Automation and articles in such journals as Organization Science, Information Systems Research, Management Science, IEEE Transactions on Engineering Management, Management Science, MIS Quarterly, Harvard Business Review, and Sloan Management Review. She has also served on three National Academy of Sciences Committees. Address: Dept. of Information and Operations Management, Marshall School of Business, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, CA 90089; e-mail: majchrza@usc.edu.

Saku Mantere (“On the Problem of Participation in Strategy: A Critical Discursive Perspective”) is acting Professor of Management and Organization at the Swedish School of Economics and Business Administration in Helsinki, Finland, and an adjunct professor at the Helsinki University of Technology. All his research interests contain an ambition to understand organizational strategy as a social phenomenon, e.g., its discourses, practices, and social positions. He has recently published works on issues such as agency in strategy work. Address: Swedish School of Economics and Business Administration, P.O. Box 479, FIN-00101, Helsinki, Finland, and Helsinki University of Technology, P.O. Box 5500, FIN-02015; e-mail: saku.mantere@iki.fi.

Marcia P. Miceli (“Antecedents and Outcomes of Retaliation Against Whistleblowers: Gender Differences and Power Relationships”) is Professor of Management at the McDonough School of Business at Georgetown University. She earned her doctorate in business administration at Indiana University. Her research focuses on whistle-blowing in organizations and on organizational compensation systems. Address: McDonough School of Business, Georgetown University, 309 Old North Building, 37th and O Streets, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20057; e-mail: micelim@msb.edu.

Janet P. Near (“Antecedents and Outcomes of Retaliation Against Whistleblowers: Gender Differences and Power Relationships”) holds the Dale M. Coleman Chair of Management in the Kelley School of Business, Indiana University. She does research in two areas: on the whistle-blowing process in organizations (including antecedents and outcomes of whistle-blowing) and on the relationship between work and nonwork domains of life, focusing on predictors of the relationship between life satisfaction and job satisfaction. Address: Dept. of Management, Kelley School of Business, Indiana University, 1309 E. 10th St., Bloomington, IN 47405-1701; e-mail: near@indiana.edu.

Eric Overby (“Process Virtualization Theory and the Impact of Information Technology”) is an assistant professor at the Georgia Institute of Technology College of Management. He received his Ph.D. from Emory University. Eric’s research focuses on the virtualization of business and society; he studies how processes that have traditionally been conducted physically are increasingly being conducted virtually. Eric focuses primarily on the economic implications of this shift. Address: College of Management, Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta, GA 30308; e-mail: eric.overby@mgt.gatech.edu.

Michael T. Rehg (“Antecedents and Outcomes of Retaliation Against Whistleblowers: Gender Differences and Power Relationships”) is an assistant professor of management at the Air Force Institute of Technology. He earned his doctorate at the Kelley School of Business, Indiana University, in strategic management. His research focuses on factors in the work environment that affect employee behavior. Address: Dept. of Systems and Engineering Management, Air Force Institute of Technology, 2950 Hobson Way, Wright-Patterson AFB, OH 45433-7765; e-mail: michael.rehg@afit.edu.

Rebecca J. Slotegraaf (“Performance Implications of Firm Resource Interactions in the Acquisition of R&D-Intensive Firms”) is an assistant professor of marketing and Eli Lilly Faculty Fellow at the Kelley School of Business, Indiana University. Her research addresses the effect of resources, capabilities, and deployment on competitive advantage and has appeared in multiple journals, including Journal of Marketing, Journal of Marketing Research, Organization Science, Decision Sciences, and Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science. She earned her Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin at Madison, and currently serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Marketing. Address: Kelley School of Business, Indiana University, Dept. of Marketing, BU 328G, 1309 E. 10th Street, Bloomington, IN 47405-1701; e-mail: rslotegr@indiana.edu.

Eero Vaara (“On the Problem of Participation in Strategy: A Critical Discursive Perspective”) is Professor of Management and Organization at the Swedish School of Economics and Business Administration in Helsinki, Finland, and permanent Visiting Professor at École de Management de Lyon, France. His research interests focus on organizational change (especially mergers and acquisitions), strategy and strategizing, multinational corporations and globalization, and the role of the media in organizing and management. He has recently worked on narrative and discursive perspectives. Address: Swedish School of Economics and Business Administration, P.O. Box 479, FIN-00101, Helsinki, Finland, and École de Management de Lyon, P.O. Box 174, 69132 Lyon Ecully Cedex, France; e-mail: eero.vaara@hanken.fi.

James R. Van Scotter (“Antecedents and Outcomes of Retaliation Against Whistleblowers: Gender Differences and Power Relationships”) is an associate professor of information systems and decision sciences at Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge. He earned a Ph.D. in business administration from the University of Florida in 1994. His research focuses on individual and organizational performance. Address: Dept. of Information Systems and Decision Sciences, E. J. Ourso College of Business Administration, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, LA 70810; e-mail: jvanscot@lsu.edu.

Eric von Hippel (“Norms-Based Intellectual Property Systems: The Case of French Chefs”) is T. Wilson Professor of Management in the MIT Sloan School of Management and Professor of Engineering Systems in the MIT School of Engineering. He is interested in the nature and economics of distributed and open innovation. Address: MIT Sloan School of Management, E52-556, 50 Memorial Dr., Cambridge, MA 02141; e-mail: evhippel@mit.edu.

Noam Wasserman (“Revisiting the Strategy, Structure, and Performance Paradigm: The Case of Venture Capital”) is an assistant professor at Harvard Business School. His research focuses on founder choices, with particular emphasis on early decisions that have important long-term implications for founders and their organizations. He received his Ph.D. from Harvard University, his M.B.A. from Harvard Business School, and undergraduate degrees in business and engineering from the University of Pennsylvania. His paper entitled “Founder-CEO Succession and the Paradox of Entrepreneurial Success” was published in 2003 in Organization Science. Address: Harvard Business School, Cambridge, MA 02138; e-mail: noam@hbs.edu.