

Organization Science

Publication details, including instructions for authors and subscription information:
<http://pubsonline.informs.org>

About Authors

To cite this article:

(2009) About Authors. Organization Science 20(4):829-831. <https://doi.org/10.1287/orsc.1090.0465>

Full terms and conditions of use: <https://pubsonline.informs.org/Publications/Librarians-Portal/PubsOnLine-Terms-and-Conditions>

This article may be used only for the purposes of research, teaching, and/or private study. Commercial use or systematic downloading (by robots or other automatic processes) is prohibited without explicit Publisher approval, unless otherwise noted. For more information, contact permissions@informs.org.

The Publisher does not warrant or guarantee the article's accuracy, completeness, merchantability, fitness for a particular purpose, or non-infringement. Descriptions of, or references to, products or publications, or inclusion of an advertisement in this article, neither constitutes nor implies a guarantee, endorsement, or support of claims made of that product, publication, or service.

Copyright © 2009, INFORMS

Please scroll down for article—it is on subsequent pages

With 12,500 members from nearly 90 countries, INFORMS is the largest international association of operations research (O.R.) and analytics professionals and students. INFORMS provides unique networking and learning opportunities for individual professionals, and organizations of all types and sizes, to better understand and use O.R. and analytics tools and methods to transform strategic visions and achieve better outcomes. For more information on INFORMS, its publications, membership, or meetings visit <http://www.informs.org>

About Authors

Maria Tereza Alexandre (“Ambidexterity in Technology Sourcing: The Moderating Role of Absorptive Capacity”) is a lecturer of business administration at the College of Business, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where she also earned her Ph.D. Her research interests focus on the interface between firm opportunities and technology management. She teaches courses on international marketing, advanced marketing management, entrepreneurship, new product marketing, retailing, and technology management. In the 2006–2007 academic year, she was ranked an “Excellent Teacher” (as voted for by the students), and for her research she received the Emerald Literati Club’s 2004 Award for Excellence. Address: Department of Business Administration, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, IL 61820; e-mail: mtalexan@uiuc.edu.

Constantine Andriopoulos (“Exploitation-Exploration Tensions and Organizational Ambidexterity: Managing Paradoxes of Innovation”) is a lecturer at Brunel Business School. He received his Ph.D. in 2000 from the University of Strathclyde (Scotland, UK). His main research interests focus on ambidextrous organizations, tensions and paradoxes in innovative firms, and the management of identity-related tensions within creative environments. Address: Brunel Business School, Brunel University, Elliot Jaques Building, Uxbridge, Middlesex UB8 3PH, UK; e-mail: costas.andriopoulos@brunel.ac.uk.

Julian Birkinshaw (“Organizational Ambidexterity: Balancing Exploitation and Exploration for Sustained Performance”) is a professor of strategic and international management, Deputy Dean of Programs, and a cofounder of the Management Innovation Lab, all at the London Business School. His research focuses on issues of innovation, entrepreneurship, and change in large multinational organizations. Address: London Business School, Sussex Place, Regents Park, London NW1 4SA, UK; e-mail: jbirkinshaw@london.edu.

Qing Cao (“Unpacking Organizational Ambidexterity: Dimensions, Contingencies, and Synergistic Effects”) is an assistant professor of management at the University of Connecticut. She earned her Ph.D. from the University of Maryland. Her research interests include strategic alliances and management of entrepreneurial firms, and her work has appeared in Organization Science and Strategic Entrepreneurship Journal. Address: School of Management, University of Connecticut, Storrs, CT 06066; e-mail: qciao@business.uconn.edu.

Eric Gedajlovic (“Unpacking Organizational Ambidexterity: Dimensions, Contingencies, and Synergistic Effects”) is an associate professor at Simon Fraser University, where he holds a joint appointment with the Innovation and Entrepreneurship and Strategy areas. His research relating to organizational capabilities and the comparative analysis of business, financial, and governance systems has been published in leading international management journals such as Academy of Management Journal, Strategic Management Journal, Journal of International Business, Journal of Business Venturing, Organization Studies, and Journal of Management Studies. He sits on the editorial boards of Journal of Management Studies, Asia Pacific Journal of Management, and Family Business Review. Address: Faculty of Business Administration, Simon Fraser University, Surrey, British Columbia V3T 0A3, Canada; e-mail: erg@sfu.ca.

Boris Groysberg (“Hiring Stars and Their Colleagues: Exploration and Exploitation in Professional Service Firms”) is an associate professor in the organizational behavior unit at Harvard Business School. His research focuses on the challenges of managing human capital in knowledge-based firms. In a number of related papers, he examines how firms develop, hire, retain, and utilize star knowledge workers. Address: Harvard Business School, Soldiers Field Park, Boston, MA 02163; e-mail: bgroysberg@hbs.edu.

Constance E. Helfat (“Organizational Linkages for Surviving Technological Change: Complementary Assets, Middle Management, and Ambidexterity”) is the J. Brian Quinn Professor in Technology and Strategy at the Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth College. Her research focuses on firm capabilities, including technological innovation and firm adaptation and change. She also has conducted research on corporate executives, including women executives. Address: Tuck School of Business, Dartmouth College, 100 Tuck Hall, Hanover, NH 03755; e-mail: constance.helfat@dartmouth.edu.

Justin J. P. Jansen (“Structural Differentiation and Ambidexterity: The Mediating Role of Integration Mechanisms”) is an associate professor of strategic management at the Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University. He received his Ph.D. cum laude from Erasmus University in 2005. His research addresses leadership, organizational learning, ambidexterity, and corporate entrepreneurship, and it has appeared in Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Business Venturing, Journal of Management Studies, Leadership Quarterly, Management Science, and Organization

Science. Address: Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University, Burgemeester Oudlaan 50, 3062 PA Rotterdam, The Netherlands; e-mail: jjansen@rsm.nl.

Linda-Eling Lee (“Hiring Stars and Their Colleagues: Exploration and Exploitation in Professional Service Firms”) is a senior analyst at Innovest Strategic Value Advisors, where she conducts research on the social and environmental performance of leading global companies. She received her Ph.D. in organizational behavior from Harvard University, and her previous publications focused on work motivation, employee turnover, and the determinants of star performance. Her current research interests include corporate social responsibility and the trajectory of the sustainability movement. Address: RiskMetrics Group, New York, NY 10005; e-mail: lindaeling.lee@riskmetrics.com.

Marianne W. Lewis (“Exploitation-Exploration Tensions and Organizational Ambidexterity: Managing Paradoxes of Innovation”) is an associate professor of management at the University of Cincinnati. Her research explores tensions, conflicts, and paradoxes that both impede and enable innovation. In particular, her work addresses the challenges of developing new products, implementing technological and organizational change, and building organization theory. Her paper, “Exploring Paradox: Toward a More Comprehensive Guide” received the Academy of Management Review Best Paper Award in 2007. Address: College of Business, University of Cincinnati, P.O. Box 210165, Cincinnati, OH 45221-0165; e-mail: marianne.lewis@uc.edu.

Tom J. M. Mom (“Understanding Variation in Managers’ Ambidexterity: Investigating Direct and Interaction Effects of Formal Structural and Personal Coordination Mechanisms”) is an assistant professor of the Department of Strategic Management and Business Environments, Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University, where he received his Ph.D. in management in 2006 and a master’s cum laude in strategic management. He also holds a master’s cum laude in international management from the Community of European Management Schools. His research addresses corporate entrepreneurship, knowledge, innovation, organizational learning, and strategic renewal. His work has been published in journals such as Journal of Management Studies. Address: Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University, Burgemeester Oudlaan 50, 3062 PA Rotterdam, The Netherlands; e-mail: tmom@rsm.nl.

Gilbert Probst (“Organizational Ambidexterity: Balancing Exploitation and Exploration for Sustained Performance”) is a professor of organization design and management at the University of Geneva, the Managing Director and Dean at the World Economic Forum, and a cofounder of the Geneva Knowledge Forum. His research focuses on managing growth, learning organization, and knowledge management. Address: University of Geneva, Bd du Pont-d’Arve 40, 1211 Geneva 4, Switzerland; e-mail: gilbert.probst@weforum.org.

Sebastian Raisch (“Organizational Ambidexterity: Balancing Exploitation and Exploration for Sustained Performance”) is an assistant professor of strategic management and the Director of the Center for Organizational Excellence at the University of St. Gallen, Switzerland. He is also a visiting scholar at the Harvard Business School. His research focuses on organization design and innovation. Address: University of St. Gallen, Institute of Management, Dufourstrasse 40a, CH-9000 St. Gallen, Switzerland; e-mail: sebastian.raisch@unisg.ch.

Frank T. Rothaermel (“Ambidexterity in Technology Sourcing: The Moderating Role of Absorptive Capacity”) is a Sloan Industry Studies Fellow and the Deedy Associate Professor of Strategy at the Georgia Institute of Technology. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Washington and serves on the editorial boards of the Academy of Management Review, Strategic Management Journal, and Strategic Organization. His research interests focus on the intersection of strategy, innovation, and entrepreneurship. He has received several recognitions for his research, including the Academy of Management Newman Award, the National Science Foundation CAREER Award, the Sloan Foundation Industry Studies Best Paper Prize, and the Strategic Management Society Conference Best Paper Prize. Address: College of Management, Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta, GA 30308-1149; e-mail: frank.rothaermel@mgt.gatech.edu.

Alva Taylor (“Organizational Linkages for Surviving Technological Change: Complementary Assets, Middle Management, and Ambidexterity”) is an associate professor at the Tuck School of Business, Dartmouth College. He received his Ph.D. from the Graduate School of Business, Stanford University, and his research focuses on innovation, including technological change, entrepreneurship, organizational creativity, and strategic change. His work has appeared in several journals, such as the Administrative Science Quarterly, Academy of Management Journal, and Organization Science. He is also on the editorial board of the Strategic Management Journal. Address: Tuck School of Business, Dartmouth College, 100 Tuck Hall, Hanover, NH 03755; e-mail: alva.taylor@dartmouth.edu.

Michiel P. Tempelaar (“Structural Differentiation and Ambidexterity: The Mediating Role of Integration Mechanisms”) is a Ph.D. student at the Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University. His Ph.D. research involves the antecedents and consequences of exploration, exploitation, and organizational ambidexterity. Address: Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University, Burgemeester Oudlaan 50, 3062 PA Rotterdam, The Netherlands; e-mail: mtempelaar@rsm.nl.

Michael L. Tushman (“Organizational Ambidexterity: Balancing Exploitation and Exploration for Sustained Performance”) is the Paul R. Lawrence, Class of 1942 Professor at the Harvard Business School, where he is also the faculty chair of the Advanced Management Program. His research interests focus on those senior team characteristics, social networks, and organization architectures associated with innovation streams within and between business units. Address: Harvard Business School, Soldiers Field Park, Boston, MA 02163; e-mail: mtushman@hbs.edu.

Frans A. J. van den Bosch (“Structural Differentiation and Ambidexterity: The Mediating Role of Integration Mechanisms” and “Understanding Variation in Managers’ Ambidexterity: Investigating Direct and Interaction Effects of Formal Structural and Personal Coordination Mechanisms”) is Professor of Management of Interfaces Between Firms and their Environments in the Department of Strategic Management and Business Environments, Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University. He holds a bachelor’s in mechanical engineering, a master’s cum laude in economics from the Erasmus University Rotterdam, and a Ph.D. in law from Leyden University. His current research interests include managerial and knowledge-based theories of the firm, strategic renewal and corporate entrepreneurship, intra- and interorganizational governance structures, corporate governance and corporate responsiveness, and integrative strategy frameworks. He has published several books and papers in journals, including Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Business Venturing, Journal of Management Studies, Long Range Planning, Management Science, Organization Science, and Organization Studies and Business and Society. He is an editorial board member of Journal of Management Studies, Long Range Planning, and Organization Studies. He is codirector of the Erasmus Strategic Renewal Center and chairman of the Advisory Board of the Erasmus Research Institute of Management. Address: Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University, Burgemeester Oudlaan 50, 3062 PA Rotterdam, The Netherlands; e-mail: fbosch@rsm.nl.

Henk W. Volberda (“Structural Differentiation and Ambidexterity: The Mediating Role of Integration Mechanisms” and “Understanding Variation in Managers’ Ambidexterity: Investigating Direct and Interaction Effects of Formal Structural and Personal Coordination Mechanisms”) is a professor and the Chairman of the Department of Strategic Management and Business Environments at the Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University. He is Scientific Director of INSCOPE: Research for Innovation, Director of the Erasmus Strategic Renewal Center, a board member of the Netherlands Institute for Social Innovation, and a member of the editorial board of Journal of Management Studies, Long Range Planning, and Organization Studies. His research on strategic renewal, strategic flexibility, co-evolution of firms and industries, knowledge flows, and innovation has been published in many books and a wide range of journals, such as Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Business Venturing, Journal of International Business Studies, Journal of Management Studies, Long Range Planning, Management Science, Organization Studies, and Organization Science. Address: Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University, Burgemeester Oudlaan 50, 3062 PA Rotterdam, The Netherlands; e-mail: hvolberda@rsm.nl.

Hongping Zhang (“Unpacking Organizational Ambidexterity: Dimensions, Contingencies, and Synergistic Effects”) is an associate professor of management at the School of Management of Shandong University. She received her Ph.D. from Southwest Jiaotong University in China, and her main research interests focus on entrepreneurial orientation and top management teams. Address: School of Management, Shandong University, Jinan, Shandong 250100, China; e-mail: hpzhang@sdu.edu.cn.