

Organization Science

Publication details, including instructions for authors and subscription information:
<http://pubsonline.informs.org>

About Authors

To cite this article:

(2003) About Authors. Organization Science 14(4):460-461. <https://doi.org/10.1287/orsc.14.4.460.17486>

Full terms and conditions of use: <https://pubsonline.informs.org/Publications/Librarians-Portal/PubsOnLine-Terms-and-Conditions>

This article may be used only for the purposes of research, teaching, and/or private study. Commercial use or systematic downloading (by robots or other automatic processes) is prohibited without explicit Publisher approval, unless otherwise noted. For more information, contact permissions@informs.org.

The Publisher does not warrant or guarantee the article's accuracy, completeness, merchantability, fitness for a particular purpose, or non-infringement. Descriptions of, or references to, products or publications, or inclusion of an advertisement in this article, neither constitutes nor implies a guarantee, endorsement, or support of claims made of that product, publication, or service.

© 2003 INFORMS

Please scroll down for article—it is on subsequent pages

With 12,500 members from nearly 90 countries, INFORMS is the largest international association of operations research (O.R.) and analytics professionals and students. INFORMS provides unique networking and learning opportunities for individual professionals, and organizations of all types and sizes, to better understand and use O.R. and analytics tools and methods to transform strategic visions and achieve better outcomes. For more information on INFORMS, its publications, membership, or meetings visit <http://www.informs.org>

About Authors

Karl Aquino ("Preferential Mistreatment: How Victim Status Moderates the Relationship Between Organizational Citizenship Behavior and Workplace Victimization") is an associate professor of management at the University of Delaware. He received his Ph.D. in organizational behavior from Northwestern University. His current research interests include workplace victimization, revenge and forgiveness in organizations, organizational justice, and the effects of personal and social identities on workplace outcomes. Address: Department of Business Administration, College of Business and Economics, University of Delaware, Newark, DE 19716; telephone: (302) 831-6144; e-mail: aquinok@be.udel.edu.

Warren Boeker ("Bringing Managers into Theories of Multimarket Competition: CEOs and the Determinants of Market Entry") is a professor of management at the University of Washington Business School. He received his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley. His research interests are focused on the evolution of entrepreneurial organizations and the effects of founder and top management power and influence on new venture strategies. Address: University of Washington Business School, Mackenzie Hall, Box 353200, Seattle, WA 98195-3200; e-mail: wboeker@u.washington.edu.

William H. Bommer ("Preferential Mistreatment: How Victim Status Moderates the Relationship Between Organizational Citizenship Behavior and Workplace Victimization") is an assistant professor of organizational behavior and leadership in the Department of Management and Robinson College of Business at Georgia State University. He received his Ph.D. from Indiana University. His current research interests include transformational leadership, organizational change efforts, and the assessment of leadership development. Address: Department of Management, Robinson College of Business, Georgia State University, Atlanta, GA 30303; telephone: (404) 651-3185; e-mail: wbommer@gsu.edu.

Elizabeth George ("External Solutions and Internal Problems: The Effects of Employment Externalization on Internal Workers' Attitudes") is a senior lecturer in organizational behavior at the Australian Graduate School of Management. She received her Ph.D. from the University of Texas at Austin. Her research interests include employment externalization, institutional theory, and workforce diversity. Her work has been published in the Academy of Management Journal and Journal of Applied Psychology. Address: Australian Graduate School of Management, Sydney, NSW 2052, Australia; telephone: +61-2-9931-9536; fax: +61-2-9931-9326; e-mail: elizabeg@agsm.edu.au.

Jerry Goodstein ("Bringing Managers into Theories of Multimarket Competition: CEOs and the Determinants of Market Entry") is a professor of management and decision sciences at Washington State University. He received his Ph.D. in management from the University of California, Berkeley in 1988. He is currently involved in theory development and empirical research that draws on the domains of corporate governance, business ethics, and institutional theory. His work has been published in such journals as the Academy of Management Journal, Administrative Science Quarterly, Business Ethics Quarterly, Journal of Business Ethics, Journal of Clinical Ethics, Organization Science, and Strategic Management Journal. Dr. Goodstein is Batten Fellow at the Darden Graduate School of Business Administration at the University of Virginia, and was in residence during January-April 2003. Address: Department of Business, Classroom Bldg. 308U, Washington State University, Vancouver, 14204 NE Salmon Creek Avenue, Vancouver, WA 98686; e-mail: goodstei@vancouver.wsu.edu.

Bill McEvily ("Free to Be Trusted? Organizational Constraints on Trust in Boundary Spanners") is an assistant professor of organizational behavior and theory at Carnegie Mellon University, where he teaches courses on international management, organizational behavior, and organizational relations and the influence of networks on knowledge sharing. Professor McEvily's research has been published in Organizational Science and the Strategic Management Journal. He has also served as Guest Editor for a special issue of Management Science on "Knowledge Management: Creating, Retaining, and Transferring Knowledge." Professor McEvily holds a B.S. in management information systems from Clarkson University and a Ph.D. in strategic management from the University of Minnesota. Address: 323 GSIA, Carnegie Mellon University, Pittsburgh, PA 15213-3890; telephone: (412) 268-4198; fax: (412) 268-7064; e-mail: bmcevily@andrew.cmu.edu.

Johann Peter Murmann ("Bringing Managers into Theories of Multimarket Competition: CEOs and the Determinants of Market Entry") is an assistant professor of management and organizations at the Kellogg Graduate School of Management, Northwestern University. In the academic year 2001-2002, he was a visiting fellow first at the Social Science Research Center (WZB) in Berlin, and then at Max Planck Institute for Research into Economic Systems in Jena, Germany. He received a BA in philosophy from the University of California, Berkeley (1990), and a PhD in management of organizations from Columbia University (1998). His main interest lies in the development of evolutionary theories for industrial phenomena. He recently finished a study of the evolution of the synthetic dye industry that was published by Cambridge University Press, Knowledge and Competitive Advantage: The Coevolution of Firms, Technology and National Institutions. He is the editor of Evolutionary Theories in the Social Sciences (www.etss.net). Address: Kellogg School of Management, Northwestern University, 2001 Sheridan Rd., Evanston, IL 60208; e-mail: jpm@northwestern.edu.

Gina Colarelli O'Connor ("Managing Interdisciplinary, Longitudinal Research Teams: Extending Grounded Theory-Building Methodologies") is an assistant professor in the Lally School of Management and Technology at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. Her fields of interest include new product development, radical innovation, and strategic marketing management in high-technology arenas. She earned her Ph.D. in marketing and corporate strategy at New York University. Her current research focuses on how large, established firms build and sustain radical innovation capabilities. She has articles published in The Journal of Product Innovation Management, the California Management Review, the Academy of Management Executive, and The Journal of Strategic Marketing, among others, and is one of the authors of the book Radical Innovation, How Mature Firms Can Outsmart Upstarts, published by HBS Press (December 2000). Address:

Lally School of Management and Technology, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, NY 12180-3590; telephone: (518) 276-6842; fax: (518) 276-8661; e-mail: oconng@rpi.edu.

Vincenzo Perrone ("Free to Be Trusted? Organizational Constraints on Trust in Boundary Spanners") is Professor of Organization and Chairman of the Institute of Organization and Management Information Systems at Bocconi University, Milano (Italy). He earned his Ph.D. from Bocconi University in 1988. He has been Visiting Professor at the Carlson School of Management, University of Minnesota, 1992–1994. His research interests focus on new organizational forms (n-form), trust in intra- and interorganizational relations, interfirm coordination mechanisms, and organizational resources for competitive advantage and forms of capital. His publications include articles in Organization Science and the California Management Review. He is a consultant for several important companies operating in Europe. Address: The Institute of Organization and MIS, Bocconi University, and SDA, School of Management, via F. Bocconi n. 8, 20136 Milan, Italy; e-mail: vincenzo.perrone@uni-bocconi.it.

Lois Peters ("Managing Interdisciplinary, Longitudinal Research Teams: Extending Grounded Theory-Building Methodologies") is an associate professor at the Lally School of Management and Technology. She teaches courses in management, organization behavior, and technological change, and has extensive experience in environmental health science. She is published extensively in the technology policy area. For more than a decade Dr. Peters has focused on partnering and cooperation among and between multinational firms, entrepreneurial small firms, and universities. Recently she has expanded her work to include a study of management of innovation and the internal research and development activities of multinational firms. She holds a Ph.D. from New York University in Biology. She is coauthor of Radical Innovation: How Mature Firms Can Outsmart Upstarts. Address: Lally School of Management and Technology, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, NY 12180-3590; e-mail: petrel@rpi.edu.

Mark P. Rice ("Managing Interdisciplinary, Longitudinal Research Teams: Extending Grounded Theory-Building Methodologies") is the Murata Dean of F. W. Olin Graduate School of Business and the Jeffrey A. Timmons Professor of Entrepreneurial Studies at Babson College. He holds a B.S. and M.S. in mechanical engineering and a Ph.D. in management from the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. He was cofounder and director of the Lally School's Severino Center for Technological Entrepreneurship and Director of Phase I of the Radical Innovation Research Project. He also served as the director of the internationally recognized Rensselaer Incubator Program, which in 1995 was recognized as the national incubator of the year. He coauthored Growing New Ventures—Creating New Jobs: Principles and Practices of Successful Business Incubation and Radical Innovation: How Mature Firms Can Outsmart Upstarts. Address: F.W. Olin Graduate School of Business, 242 A Olin Hall, Babson College, Babson Park, MA 02457-0310; e-mail: mrice@babson.edu.

Martin Schulz ("Pathways of Relevance: Exploring Inflows of Knowledge into Subunits of Multinational Corporations") is currently an associate professor at the Faculty of Commerce & Business Administration, University of British Columbia. He received his Ph.D. from Stanford University. His research interests include organizational learning, organizational knowledge, organizational rules, bureaucracies, multinational corporations, organization design, business process reengineering, mathematical models, and quantitative methods. Address: Sauder School of Business, University of British Columbia, 2053 Main Mall, Vancouver, BC V6T 1Z2, Canada; e-mail: martin.schulz@sauder.ubc.ca.

John Stephan ("Bringing Managers into Theories of Multimarket Competition: CEOs and the Determinants of Market Entry") is currently an assistant professor at Florida Atlantic University. He received his Ph.D. and MBA from Columbia University and BA from William and Mary. His work has appeared in such periodicals as Advances in Strategic Management and the Strategic Management Journal. His research focuses on the determinants and consequences of competitive interaction between firms. He is currently investigating the conditions under which tacit agreements between firms to limit aggressive competition (i.e., engage in mutual forbearance) break down. Address: Florida Atlantic University, College of Business, 777 Glades Road, P.O. Box 3091, Boca Raton, FL 33431; e-mail: jstephan@fau.edu.

Robert W. Veryzer ("Managing Interdisciplinary, Longitudinal Research Teams: Extending Grounded Theory-Building Methodologies") is an associate professor of marketing in the Lally School of Management and Technology, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, NY, and is a visiting research professor in the School of Industrial Design Engineering, Delft University of Technology, Delft, The Netherlands. His previous work experience includes product planning and product management positions with Fortune 500 firms as well as design and new product development consulting. He holds a M.B.A. from Michigan State University and a Ph.D. in consumer research and marketing from the University of Florida. His research focuses on product design, new product development, radical innovation, and various aspects of consumer behavior. Dr. Veryzer's articles appear in leading professional journals and he is coauthor of Radical Innovation: How Mature Firms Can Outsmart Upstarts. Address: Lally School of Management and Technology, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, NY 12180-3590; e-mail: veryzr@rpi.edu.

Akbar Zaheer ("Free to Be Trusted? Organizational Constraints on Trust in Boundary Spanners") is Curtis L. Carlson Professor of Strategic Management and Organization at the Carlson School of Management, University of Minnesota, and Director of the Strategic Management Research Center at the school. He received his Ph.D. from the Sloan School of Management at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He holds an undergraduate degree in economics from St. Stephen's College, Delhi, and an MBA from the Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad. Since joining the faculty at the Carlson School in 1991, he has been researching a number of issues centered around trust, interfirm relationships, and networks and has published several papers in journals such as the Strategic Management Journal, Management Science, Academy of Management Review, and Organizational Science. He was Guest Editor of a recent special issue of the Strategic Management Journal on "Strategic Networks." Address: University of Minnesota, Carlson School of Management, 3-365, 321 19th Ave. South, Minneapolis, MN 55455; e-mail: azaheer@csom.umn.edu.